To Whom It May Concern:

It is my honor to recommend Ginger Cochran, MS, RDN, CDE, ACSM-CEP, for a position with the SLO County Health Commission. I have had the opportunity to work with Ginger in a variety of settings over the past six years and because of this, know first-hand that she is highly qualified for this position.

During her internship through the California Polytechnic State University-San Luis Obispo I had the privilege of precepting Ginger during her rotation at Villa Maria Care Center where I was the Director of Food and Nutrition Services. It was quickly apparent to me that Ginger possessed valuable leadership and education skills. Because of her excellent work during her internship, I encouraged Ginger to step into a leadership role on our local district board as President Elect during my term as President. Ginger has since been a valuable member of our leadership team. In addition to her role at the district level, she has also been involved at the Academy level where she was part of the interdisciplinary team that wrote, reviewed and improved the questions for the new Certified Specialist in Obesity and Weight Management exam. In addition, Ginger serves on the Board of editors for the Nutrition Care Manual. All of these roles are important in supporting public health education.

Outside of her involvement with the Academy, Ginger also has an impressive history of both leadership and community excellence in her professional career. Ginger has worked in a variety of settings educating the public on nutrition and over the past several years has been working in the primary care and health education settings. Here she has filled several roles as a Dietitian and Certified Diabetes Educator, doing one on one counseling and leading weight management classes for bariatric patients, and those with other chronic diseases. She has experience educating people with a variety of acute and chronic health issues including diabetes, obesity, gestational diabetes and pregnancy, general weight management and more.

Ginger is also an active fitness instructor and uses this to promote nutrition and the importance of healthy habits within the community. Recently, Ginger has paved a path for herself in the media sector by reaching out to Joy Bauer, Registered Dietitian with the Today Show. She was selected to be on Joy's summer team as part of the their partnership with Women's Day Magazine and the Mayo Clinic to coach five women in their Live Long and Stronger program. She has also been able to travel to Los Angeles and New York City to work with Joy behind the scenes on marketing campaigns, recipe testing and research for TV show segments. These types of experiences are vital to expanding the public health knowledge using evidenced based nutrition education.

Ginger's list of professional accomplishments is extensive, and I am confident that these experiences along with her education and personality make her highly qualified to be an educator within your organization.

Please contact me if you have any additional questions regarding Ginger's qualifications.

Sincerely,

Jessica Gust, MS, RDN

Re: Support for a California Wellness Fund Budget Request

Dear Doctor Arambula and Doctor Pan,

The San Luis Obispo County Health Commission supports the California Wellness Fund budget proposal. The Health Commission consists of 11 volunteer appointees who are residents of San Luis Obispo County, of which six are consumer representatives, three are direct providers (physicians, nurses and dentists), and two are indirect providers (medical office managers and hospital administrators). The Commission advises the County Board of Supervisors and the Public Health Department on health matters in the county. This includes the critical importance of health prevention and wellness. Wellness is more than the absence of illness; it means health of body, mind, and spirit. It also means an abundance of justice, equity and voice.

The budget proposal is a one-time allocation of general funds in order to begin a roll-out of a statewide initiative to promote health equity and prevent key risk factors for leading causes of illness and premature death. This investment of $10 per capita represents less than 1/1000th of what California spends on health care. Investing in healthier communities can keep people from needing health care in the first place, keeping health care costs down while improving quality of life.

These funds are needed to implement strategies we know work. Local health departments and community-based organizations know how to significantly reduce risks for the leading causes of illness, injury, and premature death including heart disease, diabetes, and dementia. These diseases have common risk factors beginning in early childhood and continuing on to older adults. Unfortunately, we do not have adequate resources to scale and sustain effective programs to address these risk factors. Limited state, federal, and private funding for disease prevention is sporadic, siloed, and declining.

The California Wellness Fund will provide resources to local health departments and community organizations, including clinics and tribes, initially in a subset of jurisdictions in Northern, Central, and Southern California, using indices of health inequities to focus resources on the most vulnerable residents and communities. Recipients will work together and use local needs assessments to implement evidence-based and community-guided strategies to across the lifespan to improve access to healthy food and safe drinking water, increase opportunities to be physically active, and promote safer and healthier neighborhoods. Rigorous evaluation and accountability will measure changes in key risks for preventable illness and injury in communities with the greatest health inequities.

In 2018 community, health and business leaders of San Luis Obispo came together to develop a five-year Community Health Improvement Plan after doing an extensive Community Assessment in our county. We would look forward to working with the California Wellness Fund to implement some of our strategies for success of our Community Health Improvement Plan and ensure all San Luis Obispo County residents have the opportunity to live a healthy life.

A California Wellness Fund ultimately will benefit all Californians. This budget proposal will reach only a part of the state's population, but it will lay the groundwork for a statewide effort to scale-up the fight against preventable chronic disease, promote health equity, and improve California for all. Our state's vision for the future of health must include not only covering all Californians in times of illness, but also assuring critical investments to keep people from getting sick in the first place. We strongly urge you to support the California Wellness Fund.

Sincerely,

Mary Jean Sage, Chair
